

Welcome from the Founding and Executive Director of the Rodham Institute

Hello and welcome to the Rodham Institute Website.

I'm so glad you dropped by to learn more about our work.

Established in October 2013, RI is now housed within the Georgetown University School of Medicine

We are dedicated to improving health equity through education and community partnerships.

The District of Columbia, like many urban areas throughout the country, has numerous health disparities in cancer care, maternal and infant mortality and kidney disease to name a few. They not only shorten life expectancy but also the wellbeing of those impacted preventing them from achieving their full potential in life.

To close that gap, we believe that community members and leaders are the ones that should set their own health priorities because the people who are closest to the problems usually know the solutions.

Rodham seeks to leverage educational resources through our various academic, community, not for profit and faith based organizations to help all of DC's citizens live their healthiest and best lives.

We have joined hands with over 180 partners to tackle these health challenges in a way that always respects the dignity and autonomy of the communities we work with throughout DC

Please browse our website and learn more about us.

And please don't forget to sign up for our events page so you can join us at some of our in person and virtual events.

Be well and take care,

Dr. Gigi
